INTRODUCTION

Green Brick Foundation (GBF) is a non-governmental organization that focuses on improving education and creating better opportunities for underprivileged children, especially those who are unable to attend regular schools. One of its important initiatives is the Non-Formal Education (NFE) Programme, which provides basic learning opportunities to out-of-school children. This programme supports children who face difficulties in accessing formal education because of financial issues, missing documents, or other social challenges. Through different learning centres, the organization provides education in a flexible and supportive environment with the help of trained teachers.

My internship at Green Brick Foundation provided me with an opportunity to experience both field activities and office responsibilities. During this period, I worked on the NFE Portal, which is used to maintain information about learners, teachers, and learning centres. I also became familiar with different office activities, including finance, procurement, and human resource management. Apart from these tasks, I gained experience in literature review and observed how a Project Manager plans and supervises different project activities. Overall, this internship helped me understand the practical working system of an NGO and showed me how different departments work together to achieve common goals.

OBJECTIVES

The main purpose of my internship was to gain practical experience and understand how an NGO manages its daily activities and educational projects. I wanted to learn more about the Non-Formal Education Programme and how the NFE Portal is used to maintain important information. Another objective was to develop my data management skills by learning how to enter attendance, assessments, and students' results into the portal. I also aimed to understand the monitoring of learning centres and the process of maintaining proper records of learners and teachers.

During the internship, I also wanted to learn about the importance of B-Form documentation and how learners' personal information is entered and verified for admission purposes. Understanding the financial system of an organization was another important objective. This included learning about budgeting, billing, invoices, and procurement procedures, as well as understanding the basic responsibilities of the HR department. In addition, I wanted to improve my research and writing abilities through literature review and understand how a Project Manager handles planning, teamwork, time management, and project monitoring.

DESCRIPTION OF ACTIVITIES

During my internship at Green Brick Foundation, I participated in different activities and learned various office and field-related tasks under the supervision of experienced staff members. My work with the NFE Portal was supervised by Sir Moolchand. In the beginning, he introduced me to the portal and explained its basic functions, including how to log in and enter information correctly. After understanding the system, I started collecting attendance records from learning centre registers and entering the daily attendance of learners into the portal. I also learned how to update students' assessment records and enter their test results to keep track of their educational progress.

Along with data entry, I learned about the monitoring process of learning centres. This involved observing teachers' teaching methods, students' regular attendance, classroom activities, and the overall learning environment. I also became familiar with updating teachers' profiles by adding information such as their names, educational qualifications, work experience, and CVs. Another important task was collecting and checking learners' B-Form information before entering it into the portal. Through this activity, I understood the importance of proper documentation and learned that B-Form information is necessary for completing and confirming a learner's admission record.

I also gained basic knowledge of financial management while working under the guidance of Ma'am Kanwal. She explained how an organization's budget is prepared and how available funds are planned for different expenses, such as teachers' salaries, educational materials, and learning centre requirements. I learned about the billing and invoice process, which includes receiving bills, checking the details, obtaining approval, and arranging payments. I was also introduced to procurement procedures, where prices are collected from different suppliers, compared, and evaluated before selecting a suitable option. In addition, I learned about the basic responsibilities of the HR department, such as maintaining employee records, attendance information, and leave details.

For literature review activities, I worked under the supervision of Sir Bahadur. He guided me on how to find research articles related to a particular topic and understand their main ideas. I learned how to read research papers carefully, identify important information, and prepare summaries using my own words. This activity helped me understand how previous studies provide useful information and support new research.

I also had the opportunity to observe project management activities under Project Manager Sir Saqlain. During this time, I learned how different project activities are planned and organized, how responsibilities are distributed among team members, and how the progress of ongoing work is checked. I also observed the importance of managing time and available funds, dealing with different challenges, maintaining communication with team members, and preparing reports for donors. This experience helped me understand the important role of a Project Manager in ensuring that a project runs smoothly.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

My internship at Green Brick Foundation was a valuable learning experience that helped me develop different academic and professional skills. One of the most important things I learned was how to use the NFE Portal for entering and updating information. I realized that data entry requires careful attention because even a small mistake in a learner's name, attendance record, or B-Form details can affect the accuracy of the entire record. This experience taught me to be more careful, focused, and responsible while handling information.

I also developed a better understanding of documentation and record management. I learned how organizations maintain information about learners, teachers, attendance, assessments, and financial activities in an organized manner. Working with Ma'am Kanwal introduced me to basic financial procedures, including budget preparation, invoice checking, billing, and procurement. Before this internship, these activities were mostly unfamiliar to me, but practical explanations and examples helped me understand how financial matters are handled in an organization.

My experience with learning centre monitoring also improved my observation skills. I learned how to examine the teaching environment, teachers' performance, and students' participation in classroom activities. It helped me understand the importance of identifying problems at the field level and sharing accurate information with the concerned staff.

Working with Sir Bahadur improved my reading, writing, and research abilities. I learned how to search for useful academic articles, understand their content, identify important points, and explain information in my own words. These skills will be helpful in my university assignments and future research projects.

Another important outcome of this internship was the improvement of my communication and teamwork skills. I learned how to interact professionally with supervisors and other staff members, follow instructions, ask questions when necessary, and complete assigned tasks responsibly. By observing Sir Saqlain, I also gained an understanding of leadership and project management. I learned that proper planning, time management, teamwork, and problem-solving are important for completing a project successfully.

Furthermore, this internship taught me the importance of punctuality, patience, discipline, and professional behaviour. I became more confident in handling responsibilities and learned how to manage different tasks within a given time. Overall, the experience helped me grow academically and personally while preparing me for future professional opportunities.

CHALLENGES AND SOLUTIONS

Like every new learning experience, my internship also included some challenges. At the beginning, I found the NFE Portal difficult to understand because I was unfamiliar with its functions and data entry procedures. I was also concerned about making mistakes while entering important information. Similarly, financial terms such as invoices, billing, and procurement were new to me and required additional explanation. Another challenge was dealing with incomplete B-Form information because some parents did not have all the required documents available.

To overcome these difficulties, I regularly asked my supervisors for guidance and made notes to remember the important procedures. Sir Moolchand helped me understand the NFE Portal through practical guidance and repeated practice, while Ma'am Kanwal explained financial activities with simple examples. For incomplete B-Form records, I learned about the importance of following up with parents and informing them about the required documentation and NADRA procedures. Gradually, with continuous practice and support from the staff, I became more comfortable and confident in completing my assigned tasks.

CONCLUSION

My internship at Green Brick Foundation was an important and rewarding part of my academic journey. It allowed me to experience the practical working environment of an organization and apply some of the knowledge I had gained during my university studies. Through this internship, I developed a better understanding of the Non-Formal Education Programme and learned how an NGO manages its educational projects, field activities, and office responsibilities.

The guidance of Ma'am Kanwal, Sir Saqlain, Sir Bahadur, and Sir Moolchand played an important role in making this experience successful. Their support helped me gain practical knowledge of data management, documentation, financial procedures, literature review, and project management. I also realized that teamwork, proper planning, communication, and discipline are essential for achieving organizational goals.

As a student of English Language and Literature, this internship was particularly helpful in improving my reading, writing, communication, and critical thinking abilities. It also gave me confidence and helped me understand the responsibilities and expectations of a professional working environment. I am grateful to Green Brick Foundation for providing me with this opportunity and allowing me to learn through practical experience. I will always consider this internship an important step in my academic and personal development.
